

Blue Cross Announces Recipients of New Racial Equity and Justice Grants

Health plan invests $350,000 in eight BIPOC-led nonprofits focused on addressing racial injustice in Massachusetts communities

BOSTON, Feb. 9, 2021 /PRNewswire/ -- As part of its ongoing work to address inequities in care and to advance racial and social justice, Blue Cross Blue Shield of Massachusetts ("Blue Cross") is awarding $350,000 in Racial Equity and Justice Grants to eight not-for-profit organizations focused on addressing racial injustice in Massachusetts communities.

This grant continues the company's work to build a more sustainable, inclusive, and resilient future by supporting six Black, Indigenous and People of Color (BIPOC)-led organizations with a two-year grant, providing $25,000 in general operating support per year and two organizations with a one-year, $25,000 grant. Grantees will also have the opportunity to engage in pro-bono support.

"At Blue Cross we view racism as a public health crisis," said Jeff Bellows, vice president corporate citizenship and public affairs. "The events of the past year have highlighted the systemic racism that disproportionately affects the health of communities of color. After meaningful conversations with many of our community partners, listening to their challenges and concerns, we're pleased to expand our partnership opportunities to support BIPOC-led organizations whose work focuses on racial justice and eliminating health inequities."
